

Mel Hopper Koppelman

Mel Hopper Koppelman looks forward to living in a world where suffering is minimised, science and intuition harmoniously co-exist, and acupuncture gets the respect it deserves from the scientific and medical community.

She completed her MSc in Acupuncture in 2012 and a second MSc in Nutrition and Functional Medicine 2015. As an acupuncturist and research geek, she has consulted for a number of national patient advocacy organisations, including the UK's Migraine Action. She is the Vice President of the Acupuncture Now Foundation.

When she's not sticking patients with needles, you can find her arguing with strangers on the internet or enjoying life with her beautiful partner.
